Meandering Along the Main Stem

By WASH FAYETTE

Waldo Binegar, one of Fayette County's well known farmers, residing on Route 4, knows the value of having his name and address on each check that he gives.

Last August Waldo and Mrs. Binegar went to Canada to mingle business with a short vacation, and on his departure, Waldo forgot all of the usual papers necessary to get across the border.

Mrs. Binegar discovered that she had two blank checks bearing her husband's name and address printed on them.

These were shown the customs officers, and Waldo and his wife were readily admitted to Canada. They also found no difficulty in recrossing the border on their return.

I have made a number of trips into Canada, and have always found the customs officials on both sides of the international line very courteous and ready to help in every way possible.

However, the military authorities at the border, standing there since war opened, do not hesitate to ask plenty of questions and demand ample proof of identification at some of the customs offices.

Lovers of wild rice are going to find the delicacy just a little hard to get, I fear until after the war.

You see wild rice grows in the marsh lands about some of the lakes in northern Minnesota, and for years the Indians in that region have found it profitable to gather the rice for market. It is entirely different from the cultivated variety of rice and a very healthful and delicious food. (It usually retails at 65 cents to $1 per pound).

The reason wild rice will probably be scarce for the next year is that most of the Indians who have gathered wild rice for years are employed in defense plants or other work that is more profitable, and the wild rice is simply going to waste, according to reports from that region.

Delbert Sharrett, MM 2-c and his Seabee father, Charles Sharrett, MM 3-c, are gritting their teeth over the fortunes of war which kept them apart for over three years, threw them close together and separated them again before they had a chance to see each other.

Delbert, who has been on submarine duty based in Hawaii for three years, now is in California. Charles Sharrett, was transferred to Hawaii after 20 months in Africa, only a few days after his son had left for his mainland base.

Mrs. Charles Sharrett, 724 Peabody Avenue, had a letter from her husband in Hawaii not long ago. When she answered it she could pour a little balm on his wounds, however. Another son, James Sharrett, SOM 2-c, has been transferred from the Atlantic to the Pacific. So Charles Sharrett has still another chance to see a son before the war is over.

Phone Strike Spreading Over Nation

WLB IS DEFIED; SEIZURE LOOMS BY GOVERNMENT

Situation Getting No Better In Ohio - Many War-busy Centers Are Affected

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(P)—A growing strike by women telephone operators, assuming national significance, hit Washington today and with it came the prospect of White House action.

Not only was the war-busy capital engulfed by the strike which started a week ago in Dayton, Ohio, but the great production centers of Michigan as well. Other cities were in the path.

Operators of the nation's capital, center of a network which links the United Nations, began walking out hours in advance of the formal start set for 6 A. M. E. W. T., today, Michigan telephone employees federation members chose the same hour.

When that time came, a shift of Detroit workers left their jobs and formed picket lines, leaving a skeleton crew to handle essential calls.

In Washington, picketing began simultaneously at three telephone company buildings, but a company official said extent of the strike would have to await a change of shifts later in the morning.

There were rumblings of still more strikes in answer to the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers' appeal for assistance from 41 affiliated unions.

Long distance calls were affected primarily.

Just as the estimated 5,000 Ohio workers flatly rejected a get-back-to-work-or-else order of the War Labor Board, the 2,700 Washington operators ignored another WLB message which said that "any interference with telephone service in the nation's capital at this critical period of the war can not be tolerated."

The War Labor Board, after wrestling with the Ohio dispute throughout Wednesday, deferred its "or else" action—the possibility of the government taking over—until today. It announced last night it would refer the case to Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson—an action which normally precedes actual presentation to President Roosevelt.

The War Production Board, the War Department and other agencies interested themselves in the case but their officials declined to say whether they were taking any active part.

Women formed the rank and file of the strike show, for the first time on such a scale.

The strike started in a protest by Dayton operators against the granting of $18.25 living expense accounts to outsiders brought in to help run the switchboards. Operators in 28 other Ohio cities fell in line.

The Washington operators said they likewise objected to a similar practice here, sympathized with the Ohio strikers and in addition had some wage grievances as to basic pay scales.

Company officials have said the

NEXT BEST THING DOES LIGHT LONDON DARKNESS

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(P)—For the first time in more than five years of blackout London rejoices in the next best thing to full pre-war street lighting—a moon glow that enables pedestrians to make their way about most of the capital without flashlights.

This modified kind of lighting came on for the first time last night. Crows used to feeling their way gingerly through the darkness were noisily appreciative.

FLAMING SWORD OF NEW FRANCE HELD BY KOENIG

Professional Soldier Has No Fear of Future Political Vagaries in Europe

PARIS, Nov. 23.—(P)—There is one man among the leading personalities of new France who has no fear of future political vagaries.

He is Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, chief of staff under Gen. Charles de Gaulle, military governor of Paris and commander in chief of the Fighting Forces of the Interior.

Gen. Koenig is now second only to De Gaulle in practical authority and influence and his position is not hinged on a political mill. His entire career is that of a soldier and he has no desire to change it. Associates say his ability and popularity are such that he will take his place in the Fourth Republic as a powerful military figure through popular acquiescence.

A tall, blond, mustached general, who is only 45, he has a definite dislike for politics and shuns publicity.

A Professional Soldier

Koenig represents the flaming sword of France much as De Gaulle has been the symbol of freedom for the past four years. But whatever role De Gaulle may play in the future—even if he retires—Koenig's admirers believe he will continue as a high military figure.

The military governor of Paris is much more important than the title implies. Paris is the hub of France and to turn the wheels of industry, transportation and communication, other factors in the rebuilding must succeed first in the capital. This is Koenig's responsibility and as such he supersedes the civil authority in Paris.

Under Koenig's command, France is speedily rebuilding her army and organizing her resources to support this army.

Koenig first became prominent in June, 1942, when he commanded the gallant defenses at Birkheim but his military career began in the last war.

Commissioned at 19

Born in Caen, Koenig attended school until 17 when he enlisted in the army in World War I. Com-

1621 THANKSGIVING DAY 1944

On sun-baked Leyte island in the Philippines and amid the snow-clad hills of western Germany, GI Joe and his buddies today fight to preserve the principles for which America stands, symbolized by the nation-wide feast known as Thanksgiving.

4 More Jap Troop Ships Sunk With Leyte Reinforcements

By C. YATES McDANIEL

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Nov. 23.—(P)—American fighter planes and light naval craft tightened their precautions against landing of Japanese reinforcements on Leyte Island today as Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported the enemy apparently has chosen the Limon Bastion for his major stand in defending the Ormoc Corridor.

Fighter pilots sank or heavily damaged four troop-laden freighters, four luggers and 14 barges, a headquarters communiqué said, as they fended off an apparent Japanese attempt to send help to their forces on the Yamashita line.

No important gains were reported in the deadlocked battle for the Ormoc Corridor but Yankee infantrymen, fighting over a water-logged terrain, drew tighter the noose they have thrown around the Japanese first division at Limon.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz issued revised figures on Japanese losses in a navy air sweep over Luzon Island last Saturday, disclosing the Americans had sunk, burned or damaged 17 Japanese freighters, oilers and luggers.

American air patrols made new attacks on enemy ground installations and communication routes in the Ormoc Corridor. Japanese air activity was dismissed by MacArthur as negligible.

There were indications the Japanese are attempting to sneak reinforcements to Leyte in small units at night, rather than risk heavier losses by sending in large convoys. Light U. S. naval craft joined in counter-measures and struck enemy shipping along the coast south of Ormoc and near Pacific Island, which is midway between Cebu and Ormoc and within easy barge distance of both.

MUNITIONS WORKERS GO BACK TO WORK

PORTSMOUTH, O., Nov. 23.—(P)—Production of bombs and shell cases at the Wheeling Steel Corp.'s plant was resumed today after settlement of a strike which made 5,000,000 CIO United Steel workers idle for two days.

Labor Conciliator George H. Bell of Cincinnati announced the settlement last night after conferences with Robert Stamper, president of the Union's plant guard unit, and Steve Dixon, production unit chief.

Forty-six plant guards began the strike Monday, Bell said, in protest against discharge of a fellow guard. Production workers joined the walkout, he added, because they refused to work while the guards were on strike.

THANKSGIVING NOW OBSERVED AROUND WORLD

(By the Associated Press)

Thanksgiving came today to American fighting men in the full tide of battle—on a turkey wing and a prayer, a prayer of confidence and hope from a nation in its third wartime observance of a great American tradition.

Many civilian tables throughout the country were lacking turkey but there was no lack of it for soldiers and sailors at home and abroad.

The War and Navy departments proclaimed turkey a must for the fighting man.

JACK & HEINTZ HEAD SUED BY SON'S WIDOW

Unfit To Administer Estate, Petition Claims

CLEVELAND, Nov. 23.—(P)—A petition filed in Cuyahoga County probate court by Mrs. Ethel M. Jack asks removal of William S. Jack, president of Jack & Heintz, Inc., as executor of his son Clarence's estate.

Mrs. Jack, widow of Clarence and his second wife, seeks control of 12 1-2 percent to the concern's common stock and possession of half of $77,362.70. Her petition asserted William Jack was an "unfit and improper person" to administer his son's estate because he allegedly had "neglected his duty and has failed properly to administer the estate and collect its assets."

The widow also contended Jack claims "as his own private property assets which constitute a part of the estate."

Clarence L. Jack died May 7, 1943. His will, made before his second marriage, left everything to his father. It was probated May 18, and William Jack was appointed executor then. Inventory of the estate in August showed about $64,000.

BITTER FIGHTING RAGING ON ALL FRONTS IN WEST

Doughboys Toward Cologne And Strasbourg as British Slug Across Holland

By WILLIAM FRYE

(By the Associated Press)

American troops gouged slowly deeper into Germany today toward the flooded River Valley village of Koslar, 26 miles from the devastated city of Cologne.

They fought in ferocious opposition in rain which denied full air support deep in the fortified zone before the Rhine and meeting the best and the bulk of Nazi troops in the West.

In the South, other Americans and French swung to within 19 miles of the Alsace-Lorraine capital of Strasbourg and tightened the grip on a German Army estimated at 70,000 men in the snowy Vosges Mountains before the upper Rhine. Advances were recorded at both ends of the Vosges.

British forces in Holland moved to within two miles of Venlo in the great bend of the Maas (Meuse) River, captured the highway town of Amerika and pushed through minefields and mud. Berlin said Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery had opened a major attack toward the Ruhr arsenal.

The U. S. First Army, which captured the battered industrial city of Eschweiler yesterday, mopped up remaining opposition in nearby Durwiss and Lohn and inched forward in the Hurtgen Forest against intense fire.

Infantry of the First Army thrust two miles forward to the outskirts of Weisweiler, due east of Eschweiler, in the pre-dawn darkness of this gloomy Thanksgiving morning.

On the First Army's left, the Ninth Army overran several villages in a slow advance but encountered dug-in Tiger tanks near Koslar, two miles west of the communications hub of Julich on the Hitler superhighway from Aachen to Berlin. Resistance stiffened all along the Ninth Army front. Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson's men destroyed seven tanks.

Above Geilenkirchen, the British Second Army took Hovenx and won high ground beyond Gereonsweiler in battling toward the Roer—first major terrain obstacle in the fortified Cologne plain.

Victors of Metz, where five isolated outlying forts held out, the U. S. Third Army men pushed another mile into Germany to within 15 miles of Saarbrücken, a major rail hub. The Tenth armored division moved forward to Kesslingen, extending tank force control to 30 square miles of the Reich. Infantry of the Third was 14 miles due east of Metz, plunging toward the Rhine against reinforced German defenses.

Far to the south, the French First Army continued its advance through Alsace on Colmar, thrusting north from captured Mulhouse. Strong pockets of Germans still fought in the eastern outlet of the effort Gap, but Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's communiqué said their counterattacks had been contained.

Another force of French armor and American Seventh Army infantry provided the upper arm of a terrific squeeze on the survivors of the German 19th Army by crashing through the lower Vosges before Saverne in the northern corridor to the Rhine and Strasbourg.

The French Second armored division took Weathersweiler and Birkenwald in the hills, then closed on Saverne from north and south. The American 44th Infantry joined them and today the team was pressing forward

WAR LOAN DRIVE GIVEN SINCERE YOUTH SUPPORT

Essay Written by Scout Sent to Walter Rettig For Use If Wanted

There are no definite figures yet on the progress of the Sixth War Loan campaign—it only started Monday, and there has not been time enough for the solicitors to more than scratch the surface of their job.

There has been the customary sales promotion, and the campaign committees have expressed satisfaction with the reaction and a hopeful belief that the goal of $850,000 will be reached by the December 1 deadline.

It is the little things, they say, that are most encouraging, both for the success of the campaign and the spirit behind it. Walter Rettig, cited one example. It was an unsigned letter that was pushed under the door of his First Federal Building and Loan Co. office. First he received a telephone call telling him it was there. He said he did not recognize the voice, but was sure that it was that of a teen-aged youth—that was what impressed him as most significant.

Although Rettig has only a minor connection with the campaign, he has taken some of the leading roles in previous drives and he was principal of the high school here for the past three years before he resigned last fall.

When the youngsters take an interest in something, Rettig believes it is sound in principle because they have a faculty of being able to strip off the gloss.

The letter, neatly though perhaps laboriously typewritten, was accompanied by a note, addressed to Rettig as "chairman of the Sixth War Loan Drive, which said: "Inclosed you will find an essay written by me. If you can use it you have my full permission." It was signed by "A Scout of Washington C. H."

Here is the essay:

WHY BUY BONDS? "Why Buy Bonds? Ask the man on the corner. "I'll tell you why. In Germany when the government has a company build them tanks, guns, bombs, and boats and many other things they don't pay the company but they give the men—slave labor. But in America they give the laborers 40c, 50c, 80c, $1.50, yes, even as high as $2.00 an hour, then when pay day comes the people are free to do as they wish with their money. Do you know what happens over in Germany?

"When pay day comes all workers are lined up, names are called, they didn't work fast enough, they didn't work as good as they should, they broke too many parts, and many other things. Then when all the names are called they are taken out and put against the other wall 'The wall of Death' you know the rest—yes you're right, they were shot for their pay day.

"And what of Americans? They get paid but in a different way, they get money. These are Americans' rights to do with their money as they wish, they buy that new hat, car, bottles of beer and other things. I'm not going to say that what happened over there will happen here if you don't buy bonds, but if we buy bonds now the war will be over sooner, yes, lots sooner. And then that boy overseas will have his pay day. Yes I mean 'V' day. I know all of this you will buy bonds because this is the 'Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave'.

"Support the Sixth War Loan—buy those extra bonds and stamps now!"

practice is necessary in these times of much work and shortage of help—that it is only fair to help out-of-towners meet extra expenses.

Only high priority long distance calls were accepted in Washington beginning last night. Local service on automatic dial telephones was not affected.

Government seizure of the Ohio lines or a direct appeal from the president to the striking workers were noted in advance as possibilities. Should the government take over the companies, under the Connally-Smith Act it would be illegal for anyone to foster a strike.

Earl Culp, editor of the Ohio Federation's Bulletin, commented that "if the government takes over, it would mean at least a moral victory for the federation."

Elsewhere throughout the nation were these developments: J. A. Beirne, president of the Workers' National Federation, said in a statement released at Baltimore that the strike is "really a grievance of all telephone workers in the Bell system," and "national in scope." He added, however, that the national federation

In New York, representatives of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the Federation of Long Lines Telephone Workers arranged further consideration of a federation proposal to handle only those calls to the Ohio strike area having to do with the war effort.

The Indiana Bell Traffic Employees' Union refused aid to the Ohio strikers. "Neither the union nor its members," it said in a statement issued at Indianapolis, "are in sympathy with the action taken by the Ohio union."

SITUATION IN OHIO CLEVELAND, Nov. 23.—(P)

Eased by a growing list of sister unions throughout the nation, a strike of 5,000 Ohio telephone workers today entered its seventh day, as developments in Washington pointed toward possible Army intervention.

The stoppage, which began last Friday in Dayton, continued despite an appeal by Gov. John W. Bricker "to every employee who loves his or her country to respond to the call of duty and to return to work at once."

The strike began, Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers' leaders said, when unionists protested payment of $18.25 weekly bonuses to cover expenses of girls transferred from out of town to handle Dayton's heavy telephone traffic. Operators in 28 other cities joined the walkout in sympathy, and plant maintenance men in a number of areas voted to recognize their picket lines.

Two thousand Cincinnati union employees, who handle telephone traffic for southwestern Ohio and adjacent northern Kentucky, scheduled a vote tomorrow on whether to support their executive board's decision to join the walkout.

Revolving picket lines have been on duty 24 hours daily in most of the 29 cities since the strike started.

Randolph Elide, Ohio Bell president, broadcast a statement from Cleveland declaring "it is a disappointment to me and it must be to most of our employees that the strike is being continued in spite of the efforts of the National War Labor Board to end it."

Elide assured non-striking employees "a continuation of their jobs, despite statements by the union to the contrary."

SALVAGE REPAIR COMPANY SAVES MUCH EQUIPMENT

Bloomington Man Is Member Of Outfits Doing Notable Work

Private Harold D. Evans, expert shoe repairman, son of Mrs. Josephine Evans, of Bloomington, is a member of the 29th Quartermaster Salvage Repair Company, one of two companies which in 11 months have reclaimed and repaired $27,575.275 worth of equipment to be put back in use by Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army in Italy.

The dollars and cents figures do not weigh the value of shipping space and time saved in preparing war gear immediately behind the front instead of sending back to the States for it. Often an urgent need for specific items, that otherwise would be on the way for many weeks, is filled in a matter of hours by salvage reclamation.

The entire organization was created by Major Harris J. North of Washington, D. C., who previously organized and commanded the 230th Quartermaster Salvage Collecting Company and now is Fifth Army salvage officer, having charge of both the 230th and the 29th.

Major North's men cut out the job for themselves so as to prevent millions of dollars worth of property from becoming a total loss. Then they invented and built tools and machines. They also found manpower to operate their implements.

The 29th was activated January 10, 1943, at Vancouver Barracks, Washington, sailed from the United States August 21 of the same year and landed at Oran, Northern Algeria, September 2. The company began serving in the Italian campaign after landing at Naples November 17, 1943.

Fifth Army salvage expanded its activities to include collection, classification and segregation, storage and repair of clothing and shoes, water and gas cans, tools, canteens and mess kits, helmets, fire units, cooking ranges and all kitchen equipment, harness and leather equipment, coats and tents and tarpaulins.

The two companies return to service 200 coats a day, 40 to 50 fire units a day, 60 cooking ranges daily, 500 typewriters and other business machines a month. They repair Coleman stoves and convert gasoline lanterns into kerosene burners that work 10 times as long with the slower-burning fuel. They repair shovels, axes, rakes and saws and operate a huge metal salvage depot. Their new shop for segregation and repair of tents occupies a floor space of 10,000 square feet.

There are traveling shoe repair units and a roving sterilization and bath unit. The latter organization meets combat troops close to the front and provides facilities for them to bathe and make complete change of clothing, including shoes. Another shop, using molds improvised by the salvage men, reshapes and reclaims mess gear.

The function of the 29th is to segregate, store, repair and restore to service salvage items of every description, while these items are delivered to the 29th by the 230th. The latter company collects, delivers and basically classifies the material.

The 29th is commanded by Captain Albert F. Bartlett of Memphis, Tennessee, and its second-in-command is First Lieutenant Robert L. Brasel of Chester, Illinois.

they would measure the degree of unemployment on the basis of prewar employment standards rather than on the basis of wartime peaks. Overall employment in the Detroit metropolitan area, which includes all of Wayne and parts of three adjoining counties jumped from 859,846 men and women in March, 1940, to 1,098,315 in June, 1944, according to the Census Bureau.

Not all of these were employed in the former motorcar factories but most of them were. Accurate comparisons for the car industry are impracticable because of the scores of new sub-contractors and others who entered business following the outbreak of the war.

Because the automobile manufacturers will be returning to a task with which they are thoroughly familiar and are planning no major design changes in the initial models, this writer believes reconversion of the car industry can be accomplished as quickly as was the conversion to all-out war production.

At the same time, because of the huge backlog of demand piled up by the absence of any production since February, 1942, it will be many months after car manufacture is resumed before deliveries can be expected on anything like a normal basis.

the nation and near the battlefronts. There was morning prayer to be followed by their most elaborate wartime feast and an evening tableaux with a cast of Pilgrim descendants. The Plymouth programs were scheduled for broadcast over regular and shortwave channels.

While traditional church services were being held throughout the nation, religious services also were taking place at every Army post on the far-flung battle areas.

In London, Ambassador John G. Winant read President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving proclamation in Westminster Abbey. The Rt. Rev. Henry B. Hobson, bishop of southern Ohio, delivered the sermon.

On the home front, war plants remained on full production schedule but stores and mercantile firms closed generally.

Because of the calendar quirk which produced five Thursdays this month, there again was a mixup over the holiday date. Forty-one states and the District of Columbia followed the federal statute in celebrating today.

Arkansas, Idaho, Nebraska, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia will have their legal state holidays on the fifth Thursday, November 30, although two Arkansas cities, Fort Smith and Fayetteville, selected today for their municipal observance. Georgia will have two Thanksgiving—today by gubernatorial proclamation and next Thursday by state law.

SEE NO STRIKE OF OPERATORS IN THIS CITY

Wives of Service Men Are Included Among the Employees Here

Those in touch with the situation in Washington C. H. reiterated Thursday morning that they do not anticipate a strike of the telephone operators in Washington C. H.

There are 13 operators here, and less than half belong to the union, it seems, and five of the operators have husbands in the armed forces overseas.

Some of the operators with husbands in the service have only stated that such a strike would handicap production of war material and work against the winning of the war generally, and for that reason if for no other, they will remain on duty here.

Should a part of the members walk out, which is not anticipated in Washington C. H., operations here would not be seriously affected, it is believed, due to the fact that it is a dial system and that long distance calls alone would be the only service affected in any way.

Different Thankfulness
Americans think back, once a year, to the first and the early following days of thanksgiving. The winters were so hard and long, the labor of clearing the ground and growing crops in the wilderness were so great that the chief cause of thankfulness was the fullness of the harvest, the promise of life and hope for another year. This tradition persists, and Americans today are apt to think of Thanksgiving Day as one of gratitude for material mercies.

Nor are material comforts to be despised. They are important. We all need them. It is right and just to work hard for their attainment and to be thankful when they are thus attained. But this year they are not the center of attraction. There are other reasons, also, for grateful hearts.

A mother who has lost her son thanks God that he can suffer war no more. He has fought the good fight. He has finished his course. He has kept the faith. He goes now to receive well-earned reward.

A wounded veteran and his little family are thankful that in spite of injuries from which he will suffer a handicap all his life, he need suffer the dirt, the terror, the long weariness, the miseries of war, no more. He has done his part.

The nation is thankful that it is one year nearer to the end of war.
The world is thankful for the hope of peace.

American Legion's Work

It was the American Legion's misfortune during peacetime years to have the public judge its activities by the antics of its annual convention. And it cannot be denied that the Legionnaires tended to aid and abet this one-sided judgment. Their quieter, constructive work in the fields of welfare and citizenship was overlooked.

Now, with the war mounting toward victory, the Legion is assuming a dominant place in reconversion and rehabilitation plans. It drafted and sponsored the so-called "GI Bill of Rights." It is interesting itself in helping disabled men to find work, and it has made the wise suggestion that a World War II veteran be appointed to each draft board to assist the other members in finding re-employment for other veterans. Here in Fayette County the Paul H. Hughey Post of the American Legion has on its program many helpful plans and it has played a part in many constructive things in the community.

The fact that 300,000 veterans of this war have already joined the Legion speaks well for its prestige and appeal. The further fact that the Legion has overhauled its public relations system promises a better public understanding of its efforts. All these things suggest that the reinforced American Legion will fulfill its potentialities as a strong and active democratic group during the difficult days to come.

National Degeneration

The worst thing about this war, viewed broadly, is probably the moral deterioration of Germany. A great and gifted nation of 80 million people has turned criminal and sold its soul to the Devil. It seems like another version of the old Faust legend.

Washington at a Glance

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—In the capital, it's generally referred to as the "Battle of Pennsylvania Avenue." The professors call it the struggle between the executive and legislative branches of government, but it's really nothing more than the constant row between Congress and the President.

Few, if any, presidents have been without trouble with Congress. In the first six years of his now 12 in office, President Roosevelt probably had less trouble than most of his predecessors. There were trenchant criticisms of boondoggling, NRA, and a good many other things, but for the most part the President had Congress on his side. With the battle over reorganization of the Supreme Court and the "purge" of 1938, the picture changed considerably. Since then, only in matters of prosecution of the war has the President had Congress in his camp.

There will be 80 more changes in the House, with a net gain

WITH THE AEF IN FRANCE—(P)—Pfc. Armand J. "Frenchy" Boudreau, an easy-going infantryman was serving as a guide up front the other day when three Germans hopped out from behind a bush. Armed with two machineguns and one rifle, they had the drop on Frenchy but instead of shooting they yelled "kamerad" and surrendered themselves.

"I can't figure it out," said Frenchy. "If they wanted to surrender, why didn't they leave their guns in the brush and jump out with their hands up?"

Hints on Etiquette

When the daughter of the house is to be married by a clergyman who comes from a distant town, the family of the bride is expected to pay his expenses both ways and if he does not stay at the family home, to pay his hotel expenses also.

Today's Horoscope

A birthday today means that you are determined and venturesome, even to the verge of recklessness. You are so positive in your opinions that when you know a thing to be right, it is almost impossible to move you. People sometimes accuse you of being stubborn. Your are just and honest, but very exacting. You love with passion and vigor. Fortitude and courage will be needed to successfully overcome the many obstacles and disappointments threatening you in the next few months. The utmost vigilance is advised in all financial and business transactions. Avoid changes and conserve resources. Born today a child will be more successful as life advances. Various restricting elements gradually will be eliminated and health will improve.

One-Minute Test Answers

end, on a racial scale. The brooding spirit of the German race has turned to action and conflict.

The conflict is not glorious, no matter how courageously those demented, perverted warriors fight against great and growing odds. For they are fighting wickedly in an evil cause, where even outward victory would prove to be inward disaster. With far greater strength, talent and potential usefulness to themselves and the world than their Japanese allies possess, they sink to the half-civilized Japanese level, and every week of their savage struggle puts them lower in the scale of men created in the image of God.

Can there be a regeneration for such people in so evil a quest? God only knows. But it seems inevitable that they will have to pay, both nationally and individually, for the evil they have wrought and the pain they have inflicted. And whether they will then be capable of rising again to the full stature of human decency and enlightenment is something that no man can tell.

Copettes

Los Angeles is employing 100 women in the police department to do desk work and make investigations, relieving the men on the force for active duty. This is a new venture. Policewomen have long been known, and have been useful in cases involving women and children. Their operations, however, have been limited. Having women do the work at the stations is a sensible idea which might well have been adopted long ago.

Undoubtedly in Los Angeles and elsewhere there will be cracks about fat cops whose figures will benefit by transfer from desks to active beats. These quips are out-of-date. In most cities the average policeman is young, active and intelligent. It may henceforth be even easier to get this type, now that women are joining the force.

Diet and Health

Treating Yourself

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.
SOME of the best methods of treatment of common conditions are shamefully neglected. Most of us instinctively feel that a remedy is synonymous with a drug. Perhaps a vague faith in diet as a method of treatment of chronic disorders prevails. But ten to one, nobody in the average household ever thinks of treating a cold by hydrotherapy, which is the art of treatment by water, and which in most instances gives the most prompt relief of any method of treating a cold.

Hydrotherapy means to most some sort of institute or establishment with elaborate and costly apparatus for giving needle showers and playing water from a hose on the human form. But the average American bath room is a very good hydropathic institute, and the most valuable hydrotherapeutic procedures can be given right there.

The same reluctance prevail concerning massage. It will do wonders that cannot be accomplished with any medicine, and yet is constantly neglected. For most people it means a masseur and that means expense. Well, we will grant that a professional masseur does the job better than anyone else, but an old doctor I used to know spent his life crusading with the slogan that massage was just rubbing and anybody could make a fair stab at it, and if nobody else was around self-massage was possible and a very valuable method of treatment.

Self Massage
He came of an arthritic family and had seen his father, uncle and brother gradually become crippled and almost bed ridden. When symptoms began to show up in himself he was practicing in a small town where there was no professional masseur, so he began systematically rubbing himself. He gave all his muscles a good going over at night when he got into bed, kneading and rubbing and slapping them, and then moving his joints one after another. He at least experienced great relief from pain and muscular stiffness and never became crippled as had the other members of his family. Nothing could ever have persuaded him that his escape was not due to his self-massage.

I once saw a patient in consultation with him. The man had experienced attacks of pain in the chest over the heart region a few years before and my self-massage friend had taught him to rub the muscles of the chest whenever an attack came on. He said he guessed it was angina, but anyway the massage seemed to alter the circulation and stopped the attacks. Indeed it stopped them for several years. We know so little about the real mechanism of pain in angina that I did not feel I was in a position to disagree with him. What the patient had when I saw him in consultation was something entirely different from angina.

Amateur Massage Helpful

The professional masseur insists that a knowledge of anatomy is essential for anyone who is going to give scientific massage. I would be the last to deny it, but I think too much emphasis can be put on that. After all, it is effective mostly over muscles and on the skin and in passive movements of joints and everyone knows where they are.

The professional masseur gives very grand names to the different movements he uses: effleurage, petrissage and tapotement. But effleurage is just stroking, superficial and deep; and petrissage is friction or kneading or pressing; and tapotement is hacking and clapping and beating.

Granted that the professional masseur does them in a finished way, still any member of an intelligent family can learn to do them on the ailing one who needs them. And while I advise by all means to use the best massage you can, do not cut yourself off from this valuable remedy just because the expert is not available in your community.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

True, I was none the wiser for any of my clues, if clues they were, for I didn't know who had murdered Conrad or Claud. But still there they were, and suppose something happened to me. Not that I intended to let anything happen to me; but I did want a clear—or fairly clear conscience. Just in case.

And it was equally conceivable that the little I knew might later, in some way, clear Drue or another innocent person, rather than convict anyone.

So I wrote it quickly, a bare statement of facts about the hypodermic—not the medicine box, for that was still Drue's secret—put it in an envelope, and, as I didn't know what else to do with it, I pinned that too to the under side of my uniform, just below a pocket so it didn't show, and patted it down flat.

Even then, however, I didn't go to Drue. I had nothing to tell her, nothing at all to offer that would give her support, except my affection for her and she knew she had that.

Besides, I'd have to ask her again about the medicine box.

But I was beginning to be thankful for the trooper on guard at the door. Whatever the intention was, the result must be a degree of safety for Drue. After that twilight moment or two down in the meadow, a queer and horrible un-afeness was everywhere in that house, among the shadows of driveway and garden, across the stretch of lawns, around every corner. Even the encircling, shadowy hills seemed to know it and wait and watch.

I went first in search of Anna's room. The narrow hall that crossed the main corridor near the stairway led to the back of the house and I turned into it, passed the entrance to some rather steep back stairs, turned again and brought up in a wing that was obviously the servants' wing. I walked along, passing one or two open doors beyond which Anna obviously was not, and came to a closed one.

And just as I knocked someone inside the room spoke. It was a murmur, further muffled by my knock, but it sounded masculine. And it stopped abruptly at the sound of my knuckles on the door.

But it was Anna's room; for, after a longish pause, I knocked again and then Anna said quaveringly, "Is that you, Gertrude? I—I'm asleep."

"It's Miss Keate. I want to see you."

There was another sudden silence on the other side of the door. This time however there was a quality of consternation about it. Anna was not the type for tender dalliance; I didn't even think of that. But I didn't imagine the consternation either for it was plain in Anna's voice when she said suddenly, almost at the keyhole, breathlessly, "I—I'm all right now. I'm not upset any more."

And when I insisted, she just kept repeating it, "I'm all right. Thank you, Nurse. There's nothing wrong—nothing wrong..." with her voice growing thinner and more frightened at every word. It was exactly as if whoever was there with her, and had stopped talking when I knocked, was standing beside her holding a club over her head.

But it wasn't really till sometime the next morning that they found the other yellow glove, bloodstained and stiff, hidden under the mattress in Anna's room. And by that time it was impossible to question her.

Well, luckily in a way, I didn't yet know about that. And I couldn't break down the door to Anna's room and I couldn't see through hard pine.

I said, "Open the door, Anna. Bebeens said you were ill. I'd like to get some medicine for you."

"Thank you, Miss Keate. No, I'm all right now." There was another slight pause, and she added, "I don't need medicine, thank you. I don't need anything."

So in the end I was obliged to retire to the end of the hall, loudly, and return on tiptoe to the open door of a room opposite Anna's.

But after five minutes no one had emerged and there was no further sound of a (possibly) masculine voice from behind the closed door on which my eyes were glued. I was eyeing the keyhole thoughtfully and, indeed, had toptoeed nearer and was bending over (merely to see if a key was in it; as there was) when I heard foot-steps behind me and straightened and whirled around and it was Bebeens.

Who said "Ah!" and coughed, giving me a chance to pull myself together. Not that I needed it; I said "Yes, Bebeens?" as calmly as if keyhole investigation were my everyday and normal activity.

"Dear, dear," observed Bebeens, and again coughed and choked and coughed so wildly that I saw he was agitatedly concerned with something else. His eyes were bulging and his throat palpitated like a fish's gills above the little white wings of his collar.

Craig wanted me—at once, he said.

Not even by a look did he question my presence just where I was and where I had no business to be. So I followed Bebeens back to Craig's room and Craig was waiting impatiently, watching the door. "There you are!" he snapped. "Come. That's all, Bebeens. Shut the door."

Bebeens hesitated. "If you please, Mr. Craig..." He looked uneasy but so determined that it checked Craig's impatience.

"What is it, Bebeens?"

The butler cleared his throat and came nearer the bed. "Two things, really, Mr. Craig. I've been in some doubt, but I—if you feel quite able..." He glanced anxiously at me as if for my permission and Craig said quickly, "Yes, of course. What is it?" Bebeens swallowed. "A large blue vase has disappeared from the hall."

Craig frowned, his eyes perplexed. Bebeens added, "No one knows anything about its disappearance."

After a moment Craig asked, "What else?"

The other item Bebeens had to relay was more serious. "It's a question of alibi, sir," he said. "Mr. Nicky told the police he spent two hours this afternoon in the morning room; he said he didn't leave the room at all—during the time Dr. Chivery was killed. And Gertrude—the housemaid—saw him there twice."

"Well, go on."

"But he did leave, sir. I saw him."

Craig sat up abruptly. "You saw him? When? Where?"

Bebeens looked quickly over his shoulder and lowered his voice still further. "He went out the side door, sir. Walking toward the garage. I thought nothing of it naturally. Until the police..."

"What time?"

Bebeens swallowed hard. "Not more than half an hour before the nurse found Dr. Chivery, and reached us with the news. Scarcely half an hour, as a matter of fact."

There was another silence. The butler's eyes watched Craig and reserved conclusions. And I thought: Was it Nicky then in the meadow? But Claude Chivery had been dead for some time when I found him. Then why, if it was Nicky, had he lingered? Or had he returned for something? The glove? The knife?

Craig said, "Am you sure it was Nicky?"

Bebeens permitted himself a slight shrug. "I saw him walking toward the garage and thus toward the meadow. Besides, I couldn't mistake his checked coat; I was looking out the pantry window. But I didn't see him return. I was busy then in the dining room; he could have returned by the door just opposite the back stairs, gone upstairs and then down again by the front stairs. There's no doubt he had returned by the time the nurse reached the house." He paused. "Shall I tell the police, sir? I heard them question him and he definitely did not admit his absence from the house."

"Yes..." murmured Craig, and changed his mind. "No! No—I'll tell them. Is that all, Bebeens?"

It was apparently all. But after Bebeens had gone, closing the door carefully behind him, Craig lay for a moment in thoughtful silence; he looked perplexed—but there was something else in his eyes, as if Bebeens' story had given him the barest glimpse of some new idea.

Craig finally shook his head in an impatient and perplexed way and looked at me. "See here, Miss Keate, I've been thinking. You're fond of Drue, aren't you? Never mind answering. I've got eyes. Well, then..." He paused, his gaze plunging deeply into my own as if to test some quality within me. "Look here," he said. "I've got to trust you. You're pretty discreet—aren't you?"

I lifted my eyebrows and nose. Presently he frowned and said slowly, "It's not me or you that's in danger. It's Drue. If he gets hold of material evidence against her..."

"All right. Tell me quickly."

Thanksgiving Anniversary on Attu

By NORMAN BELL

ATTU, Aleutians—The only women on Attu—ten Navy nurses—counted this November as an anniversary month. Eight of them arrived a year ago Thanksgiving Day. The two others came a short time later.

On the whole they have liked living on this outermost of the Aleutians, a feeling just contrary to that held by most of the thousands of men of the armed forces stationed on the island.

"We've been busy with the job we came here to do," said Lt. (jg) Judy N. Wilson, the head nurse. "We have comfortable quarters and enough recreation, such as bowling, hiking and fishing, to keep the days from being monotonous."

Mrs. Wilson, whose home is at Clarksford, Ida., entered the regular Navy in 1936, leaving a position with the Alaska railroad hospital at Anchorage. Her service since has included duty at Bremerton, Wash., and Pearl Harbor.

A question concerning the social demands on the little group of nurses brought a frown from Mrs. Wilson. She said that even if they were the only women on the island, they were there first as Navy officers and nurses. She added:

"And don't report that we go around wearing slacks. We wear uniforms."

Ens. Hazel Nyhus, of Forest City and Esterville, Iowa, also dismissed the social side of life on Attu with a slightly weary shrug. She preferred to talk about outdoor recreations. "We have two bicycles," she said, adding that the handy vehicles were gifts from the ever-helpful Seabees.

The nurses, when they first arrived, adopted a rule of accepting only group social engagements.

This united front policy was later relaxed to some extent. And romance edged in.

Lt. (jg) Elaine Gallagher, of Plainview, Minn., one of the original eight, and Lt. (jg) Phil Brady, of Shrewsbury and Red Bank, N. J., a Navy flyer, announced their engagement last summer. The announcement was after Lt. Brady had recovered at the hospital from injuries received in the crash of a Navy PBV.

The ten nurses have quarters in the Navy hospital area on Massacre Bay. This is one of the points at which United States amphibious forces saw a r m e d ashore in May of 1943 to wipe out Japanese invaders of American soil in 20 days that saw some of the grimmest fighting of the war.

Only one other white woman had lived on Attu before them. This was Mrs. Foster Jones, school teacher and wife of a weather station observer. She and her husband were on the island when it was invaded by the Japanese in 1942. She is believed to be a prisoner in Japan.

Others of the eight who arrived on Thanksgiving Day, 1943, are:

Lt. (jg) Lydia Krieler of East Bernard, Tex.; Lt. (jg) Annabel McConnell of Two Rivers, Wis.; Lt. (jg) Thelma Rothstein of 2327 Stewart st., Berkeley, Calif.; Ens. Elizabeth Morgan of 1300 W.

Wishkah, Aberdeen, Wash.; Ens. Marcella Setzer of Gettysburg, S. D.

The two later arrivals are Lt. (jg) Claudia Liljegen of Springfield, Ark., and Ens. Patricia Riordan of San Francisco, Calif.

The beaver, fairly plentiful in the southern valleys of Norway, was saved from extinction by government restrictions against killing.

Ed Carey Talks (Thanksgiving) Turkey

Bert Childers hails Ed Carey on his back porch. "What you doin', Ed?" he asks.

"Pluckin' our Thanksgiving turkey," Ed replies.

"Looks like a chicken to me," says Bert. "Looks like one to me, too," Ed allows. "But with so many turkeys goin' to our fightin' men, some chickens got to do a turkey-size job."

Guess that's the way Thanksgiving is going to be in a lot of homes this year. We'll be sitting down to rationed foods and substitutes—and being mighty glad about it!... knowing that the best is going to our men overseas.

And from where I sit, the most important thing of all isn't rationed. That's the Spirit of Thanksgiving! Today—as the lights are going on again all over the world—there's more of it than ever! And more cause for it—as the powers of darkness yield to freedom, tolerance, and human kindness!

BOOKWALTER LADIES AID HAS UNUSUAL RECORD

Noble Work Done To Bring Christmas Cheer to Boys in Service

Probably no other small organization in this part of Ohio has done more to bringing Christmas cheer to the men in service than the Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian Church of Bookwalter.

The society, of which Mrs. Marvin Stockwell is president and chairman of the committee for sending Christmas packages, has sent 26 Christmas parcels to as many service men from the Bookwalter community who are overseas, and in addition has sent Christmas greetings and a $1 bank note to eight other home boys who are in the armed service in the United States.

As each Christmas parcel cost approximately $2.50 and, counting postage and the money sent to the men in the U. S. training camps, it means an outlay of about $75 on the part of the society, not counting the vast amount of work necessary to obtain the contents of the parcels, pack them and mail them.

For a society of about one score members, that is rated an exceptionally fine record, and could not have been done if the entire membership had not entered into the project wholeheartedly and stuck to the work to put it through.

Finding that it was going to take more money than was in the Aid treasury, the women planned and carried out a food sale in this city, and added materially to their Christmas package fund.

As a result of their fine work, every man who receives one of the packages and greetings, is going to feel that the folks back home, in addition to his immediate relatives, are interested in him.

The Christmas boxes contained such useful articles as razor blades, shaving cream, V mail stationery, pencils, combs, ointment and other articles which can not be obtained by the boys overseas.

Already Mrs. Stockwell has received a letter from an appreciative Fayette County soldier who received one of the Christmas boxes.

He is Laurence E. Brown, E. M. 3rd C, aboard a U. S. Naval vessel in the Southwest Pacific and his letter follows:

Nov. 4, 1944.

"Dear Mrs. Stockwell:—
I received the Christmas package sent by you today. Everything was in tip-top shape. I feel grateful in getting the package and give my thanks to you and the Ladies' Aid of Bookwalter. The things sent to me were articles that we cannot get at our ship's service store.

"We may not be able to eat a Christmas dinner at home, but our thoughts will be there. All of us know that even if folks on the home front cannot be out here with us, their minds and hearts are with us. I guess that is just the spirit of freedom which we are fighting for.

"Again I wish to thank you for everything and I close in wishing you a Merry Christmas.

"Yours very truly,
Laurence E. Brown."

War Projects Of DAR Are Announced Here

The Ohio Society, D. A. R., has several war-time projects calling for immediate attention. State Chairman of National Defense, Mrs. S. C. Frantz of Bellefontaine, and Mrs. Z. C. Oseland of Akron, State Chairman of the Ellis Island committee, are working with the individual D. A. R. chapters to get the special supplies needed for our soldiers and navy men. Mrs. E. L. Morgan, regent of the chapter here announced today.

The blood plasma fund which totaled $365,203.45 last year will no longer be emphasized, as the Red Cross had advised the D. A. R. that the blood plasma equipment is sufficient. Added to the program this year is the sponsorship of three amphibious landing craft ships out of New York where crews and officers and nearest of kin are adopted by the D. A. R. of Ohio. Each chapter has a crew member. It will be the chapter's obligation to send letters, gifts, magazines, cigarettes, books and needed articles to the crew members on birthdays, Christmas and other occasions as these men are sent to desolate regions of the globe. The three ships assigned to Ohio are U. S. S. (L) L. C. I. No. 578, 619 and 620.

The work now at Ellis Island is mainly occupational therapy, in the workshop, wards of the U. S. Marine Hospital and the tubercular patients of Marine Hospital or Staten Island, and for the more western states, the Marine Hospital at Angel Island in San Francisco Bay. The D. A. R. war service at these places provide occupational therapy treatments for an average of 50 patients per day, who have suffered injury in this war in our armed forces. The D. A. R. chapters in Ohio are raising money to operate and equip these workshops. This will be known as the "Pennies for Patriots" fund.

DAR Sponsors Song Contest; Rules Are Listed

The Ohio State Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution is sponsoring a prize song contest with a grand prize of $50, which is open to any person, of any age, whether a member of the D.A.R. or not. Mrs. E. L. Morgan, regent, announced today. Anyone interested in further details of the poem contest should contact Mrs. Leonard R. Korn, chairman of the Advancement of American Music committee here, or Mrs. Morgan.

In announcing the contest, Mrs. Morgan outlines the following rules which apply to the contest:

1. Write a poem in praise of Ohio. Use the lyric form, do not use free verse. Make the words sing, remember it is to be set to music.

2. All entries are to be judged anonymously. State winners will enter a national contest and be recognized nationally. All entries will be submitted to the D.A.R. state chairman, Miss Winifred Rader.

3. The poem contest ends January 1, 1945, at midnight and all entries must be in by that time.

Warm Beauty

By ALICE ALDEN

COMFORT AS well as charm and beauty has to be considered these chilly days. Which is why every shop is featuring cozy dresses of woolen fabric high-lighted with touches of glitter and other trimming. A caravan of elephants outlined in beige iridescent paintlette embroidery is the eye-catching glitter for this otherwise simple frock of beige wool jersey. Wind blown revers and gathered fullness on either side of the skirt are other details of this New York fashion designed by Samuel Kass.

KILLER STILL LIVING AFTER LAPSE OF YEAR

Thanksgiving Is Anniversary Of Triple Murder of McCoy Family

A year ago this Thanksgiving Eve one of the most atrocious crimes in the criminal annals of Ohio was committed in Fayette County, and for months resulted in the attention of millions of people throughout the nation and in other countries, being focused on this city until James W. Collett was convicted and sentenced to death for the cowardly murders of Elmer McCoy, his wife Forrest and their daughter Mildred.

For the murder of the McCoy family, which took place at their farm home five miles north of Washington C. H., Collett, 61-year-old Clinton County farmer, brother-in-law of Mr. McCoy, is now in death row of the Ohio Penitentiary, under sentence of death, awaiting outcome of his appeal, to the district Court of Appeals, seeking to have the death sentence set aside.

This decision is expected within the next few days, and if the decision of the lower court is affirmed, Collett, who was found guilty of murdering the McCoy family "for profit," will be sentenced to die at some early date, and unless he further appeals his case, the sentence will be carried into execution at that time.

Most of the bloody details of the shocking crime are still fresh in the minds of Fayette County residents. They recall how the murders were discovered Thanksgiving morning (November 25) by Dewey Claytor, tenant on the McCoy farm.

McCoy's body was slumped near the door in his barn. He had been shot through the back of his head, apparently totally unaware of the intention of his assassin.

Mildred McCoy's body, shot almost identically in the manner as her father, was lying on the frozen ground beside her automobile, parked in the barnlot immediately back of the house.

Mrs. McCoy's body was on a side porch, seven or eight bullets having been fired into her body and through her head, two of these shots being fired after her blood-soaked body had been turned over by the fanatical killer.

Today the large bloodstains have disappeared from the floor of the porch, but three holes are still in the floor where the high-powered bullets pierced the boards after passing through Mrs. McCoy's body, and a bullet hole in the kitchen door casing shows where the first bullet went wide of its mark.

The arrest of the Clinton County farmer, his legal battle to prevent being brought to justice, and finally his sensational trial, conviction and sentence to die, followed.

The death sentence was passed by Judge H. M. Rankin on March 29, and Collett was sentenced to die July 26, but when he carried the case up, a stay of execution was granted.

Outside of a visit or two by his wife and son since his confinement, Collett has had virtually no visitors, and his stoic demeanor which marked his entire connection with the case, has not changed.

Today the McCoy farm house stands empty as it has been since the murders, and it will not be occupied until first of the year, when a farm tenant will move into it.

Tens of thousands of the curious have driven past the scene of the crime, and today where the life-blood of the pretty school-teacher daughter soaked the ground, the soil is covered with green sod and there is little evidence of the crime that shocked the entire nation.

A metal sign, bearing the name of Elmer McCoy, a picture of a Poland China hog, and the words, "Poland China Hogs," still swings from a post at one corner of the front yard, a mute reminder of the well known farmer and hog breeder who, with his wife and daughter, met death at the hands of one of the most cold-blooded killers the country has ever known.

FIND WATER SUPPLY ABUNDANT FOR TOWN

Jeffersonville citizens are finding the water supply not only abundant for that town during the drought, but the water is of exceptionally fine quality, because it passes through the filtering plant for softening it.

So far there is no indication of a water shortage, providing ordinary caution is exercised not to waste water while the water level is down many feet below normal.

OFFICIALS TO HOLD MEETING NOVEMBER 29

Township Trustees and Clerks To Take Up Question Of Fire Fighting

When the annual meeting of the Fayette County Township Trustees and Clerks Association is held at the Washington Country Club Wednesday evening, Nov. 29, one of the main questions to be taken up for discussion is better fire protection for farm property.

The meeting will open at 6:30 P.M. with a turkey dinner, and the township officials and their wives will attend the gathering. State President, Joe Thomas, will be present, and will be one of the chief speakers.

The meeting will be presided over by the county president, E. A. Vannorsdall.

A floor show, orchestra for dancing and Walter Shoop, accordionist will provide entertainment.

Fire Chief George Hall will be a guest, and will be invited to take part in the general discussion of better fire protection for every part of the county.

At the present time only a small portion of the rural area has provided for fire protection, and each year much farm property is destroyed that could be saved with adequate fire fighting equipment located at some central point in the various townships.

It is pointed out that protection from this city could be furnished only over a limited area surrounding the city, and a truck has been equipped and is at the fire department here, ready for such emergency runs.

Some definite action on the part of the respective townships not having adequate fire protection at the present time, is anticipated in the near future, as it is being realized more and more that a great deal of farm property burns needlessly because no fire fighting equipment is available.

So far Jefferson township is the only one in the county that has fire fighting apparatus and crew.

SOLDIER FROM HERE IN LEYTE INVASION

Pfc. Cecil Coates Has Fought From Arctic to Tropics

In the mud of the typhoon drenched hills around Ormoc Valley on bloody Leyte of the Philippines were probably at least one Washington C. H. boy who knows what war is and how to fight Japs.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Coates have just received their first letter in weeks from their son, Pfc. Cecil Coates saying he was in the first wave of American doughboys to hit the beach at Leyte. He described the going as "tough" and said he had his "fingers crossed" as he pressed forward in the conquest of the islands.

Pfc. Coates climbed into a big bus here the morning of September 19, 1942 along with a lot of other boys from here and waved a sober-faced goodbye to his father and a few friends standing on the sidewalk in front of the Draft Board headquarters. He has not been home since—but he has seen some far-away places in the last two years, places he never dreamed he ever would see. This war has taken him from the Arctic to the tropics.

He is a veteran of four invasions of Jap-held islands. He was with the doughboys who took Kiska, and drove the enemy off at Attu in bloody fighting that left many graves on that desolate Aleutian island. Then, with those far northern outposts secure, he boarded a transport with other American troops and sailed south over the broad expanse of the Pacific, trading his heavy clothing for a uniform more suitable under the tropic sun.

Then came Kwajalein where the Japs made their savage but futile stand in the Marshall Islands.

After that Pfc. Coates got a rest. He was sent to romantic Hawaii to recuperate from what is called battle fatigue. How long he was there his parents do not know exactly. But now he is back in action—in the Philippines.

Before the war, Pfc. Coates helped his father, who trained a stable of fine saddle horses at the Fairgrounds here.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

It is with pleasure that I announce the association of my son, Dr. Robert D. Little, in the practice of Veterinary Medicine, who will specialize in Swine and Small Animal practice.

Dr. Robert Little graduated at Park College with his B. A. degree, then, after two years at Ohio State in advanced chemistry, he entered the College of Veterinary Medicine at Ohio State and graduated in March, 1943. Since that time he has been associated with the Columbus Serum Co., at Columbus, Ohio, acting as assistant manager in the production of Anti Hog Cholera Serum and Virus.

SCHOOLS MARK THANKSGIVING ON WEDNESDAY

Cantata Presented at WHS Assembly; Elementary Schools Also Observe

A chorus of 45 voices presented the cantata, "Childhood of Hiawatha" in the Thanksgiving assembly at the high school Wednesday afternoon.

Directed by Miss Mary Elizabeth Browning, the cantata included choral numbers as well as a solo by Hal Summers and a duet by Mary Evelyn Twining and Sally Streater. Cindy Harper played the accompaniment.

The assembly opened with William B. Clift leading group singing of "America the Beautiful." Stephen C. Brown, principal, read the 103rd Psalm as the scripture reading.

Elementary Schools

No special programs marked the Central School Thanksgiving observance but students in each room contributed enough food to make six bushel baskets to be distributed to charity. This year's baskets were much larger than those sent out last year, it was said.

At Eastside school, the upper grades had special programs. The third and fourth grades presented a play, "The First Thanks," giving. Participating were Dennis O'Conner, Ann Dews, Nancy James, Jerry Dunton, Barbara Ward, Wanda Benning, Irene Smith, David Crone, Jimmy Moats, Barbara Coder and Robert Griffith. Recitations were given by Ann Hise, Sherry Bright and Richard Tracy.

In the fifth grade Gwendolyn Aills gave a reading, "The Beginning of Thanksgiving" after the program opened with a Bible reading by Patty Beso, a hymn and the Lord's Prayer.

A playlet, "Our Four Freedoms," also featured the fifth grade program. In it were Billy Humphries, Mildred Ervin, Donald Gillie, Shirley Church, Joan Sealy, Buell McBrayer, Bonnie Warner, Gwendolyn Aills, Richard Coble Nancy Spencer, Margaret Wilson, David Self, Douglas Young, Patty Beso and Betty Lou Bapst.

In a musical program for all of Eastside school Wednesday morning, Robert Lewis, Jo Lynn Parret, Ann James and Freddie Brandenburg participated. A quartet of musicians from the high school also participated under the direction of William B. Clift. Marita Craig played a clarinet solo and a duet with Claire Frances Campbell. Claire also played piano accompaniment for Carol Ann Gidding's violin solo and Joe Cullen's saxophone solo.

GOOD FIRE RECORD FOR CITY SCHOOLS

All Five Can Be Emptied in 3 Minutes 15 Seconds

In case of fire, the city's five schools can be emptied in three minutes and 15 seconds collectively.

That was revealed Wednesday in an unexpected fire drill check by John W. Sullivan, deputy state fire marshal, and George Hall, fire chief.

Here is the record made by the schools, which Sullivan called above the average in this district. He said, in fact, the high school time was less than any other high school.

The times are: High school and Central school, 1 minute 45 seconds; Eastside, 45 seconds; Rose Avenue, 40 seconds; Sunnyside, 35 seconds and Cherry Hill, 50 seconds.

SHERIFF SAYS HE DIDN'T USE BRIBERY IN CAMPAIGN

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 23.—(P)—Pleas of innocent were entered today by the attorney representing Clark County Sheriff Niles E. Young and his campaign manager two years ago, William DeWitt, who were indicted by a special grand jury on charges of bribery.

Both were released on bond awaiting trial.

The special grand jury resumed its session this morning.

COUNTY HEALTH BOARD SEEKING ANOTHER NURSE

Health Activities Are Greatly Reduced in County in Recent Months

Jesse Blackmore, president of the Fayette County Board of Health, and Walter Sollars, member of the board, said Thursday that they are planning to go to Columbus the first of the week in an effort to procure a county health nurse, badly needed in the county to assist in the vital health work that has been greatly reduced during recent months.

Last March Miss Elizabeth Rowan resigned as health nurse after many years of excellent service and in October Miss Susie Garringer tendered her resignation as health nurse, and is attending school at the University of Michigan.

This left the county without a health nurse, which has greatly complicated health efforts generally, as well as resulted in temporary abolishment of the chest clinics and check-up of school children, two very vital matters.

County Health Commissioner, Dr. W. D. Maag, of Jeffersonville, who has not been in good health for a number of years, is the full time health commissioner; Dr. William Bolton is the sanitarian of the department and Miss Norma Flee has charge of the important task of keeping the records and doing stenographic and other work in the office.

Members of the Board of Health are seeking to bring about an efficient organization as soon as possible. One nurse, and if possible, two, will be sought as the first steps.

The U. S. Public Health Department pays for the county nurses, and funds for such payment, it is understood, are being received here regularly.

Dr. Maag, health commissioner, states that he is handicapped with the work of establishing quarantines and making the necessary check in connection with the quarantines, due to no nurse to assist.

The greatly reduced activities of the health department are due in part to war conditions, and by reason of other conditions the board members feel that steps should be taken to keep the department at the highest possible point of efficiency to safeguard the health and welfare of the community.

In addition to Jesse Blackmore and Walter Sollars, other members of the county health board are Dr. L. L. Brock, Charles Bryant and D. V. Glass.

How To Relieve Bronchitis

Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

Thanksgiving "Over There"

Can he give thanks today?
Today—when war machines
Will scarcely pause
And give him time to pray
Can he give thanks?
Oh yes! because he knows
The things he's thankful for
Are those
That he's been fighting for;
That little home, the fire light on the wall;
The Church across the way,
Its spire so tall;
The quiet hour, the Bible on the stand;
A little blue eyed boy, a box of sand;
The flag at school, Old Glory
Waving high;
The grass he loved to mow,
The birds against the sky;
Then there's his pals, Ed and
Joe and Jim
And that funny little dog
That always followed him;
The air he used to breathe,
So fresh and pure and clean;
The snapshot in his hand,
The boy he hasn't seen
For months, or is it years?
A parting smile from someone
While holding back the tears;
For these he can give thanks!
Someday, he'll tell his son
The things he's fighting for,
The simple things;
They're written on his heart.

FUNERAL RITES HELD FOR MRS. DICKERSON

Rev. Arthur George, pastor of the Gregg Street Church of Christ, conducted the funeral services of Mrs. Florence M. Dickerson, at the Cox and Parrett funeral home, Wednesday at 2 P. M.

A large number of relatives and friends were present to pay farewell tribute to Mrs. Dickerson.

There were many lovely floral gifts.

The choir sang three hymns: "The Lord is My Shepherd," "Closer My Child to Me" and "Precious Lord Hold My Hand." Miss Virginia Matney sang "Jesus Savior Pilot Me."

Interment was made in the Washington C. H. Cemetery.

The pallbearers were: Paul Allen, William Cross, Theodore Eubanks, John Langley, Frank Swane and Carl Eubanks.

GOODYEAR MAN TO BE SPEAKER FOR FOREMEN

Arthur C. Horrocks's Subject Will Be "Human Engineering" On December 1

Arthur C. Horrocks, public relations counsel for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, will be the featured speaker at the December 1 meeting of the Washington C. H. Foremen's Club.

The dinner meeting will begin at 6:45 P. M. fast time and the program at 7:45 P. M. fast time. Reservations may be made with Floyd Revare or the API switch-board operator at 2597. The meeting is at the American Legion Hall.

Horrocks's subject is "Human Engineering." It is said his background of combined production and education, coupled with years of practical research, gives Horrocks the equipment necessary to present a down-to-earth picture of production problems.

Soon after Horrocks had graduated from Baldwin University with honors in oratory he began working with the Goodyear Company. He gradually stepped up from posts of production foreman, production control, production engineer, personnel manager, sales and sales school. With the beginning of the Goodyear Industrial University, he was selected as its head.

A movie, "Synthetic Rubber" will follow Horrocks' speech.
